Patrick Smith

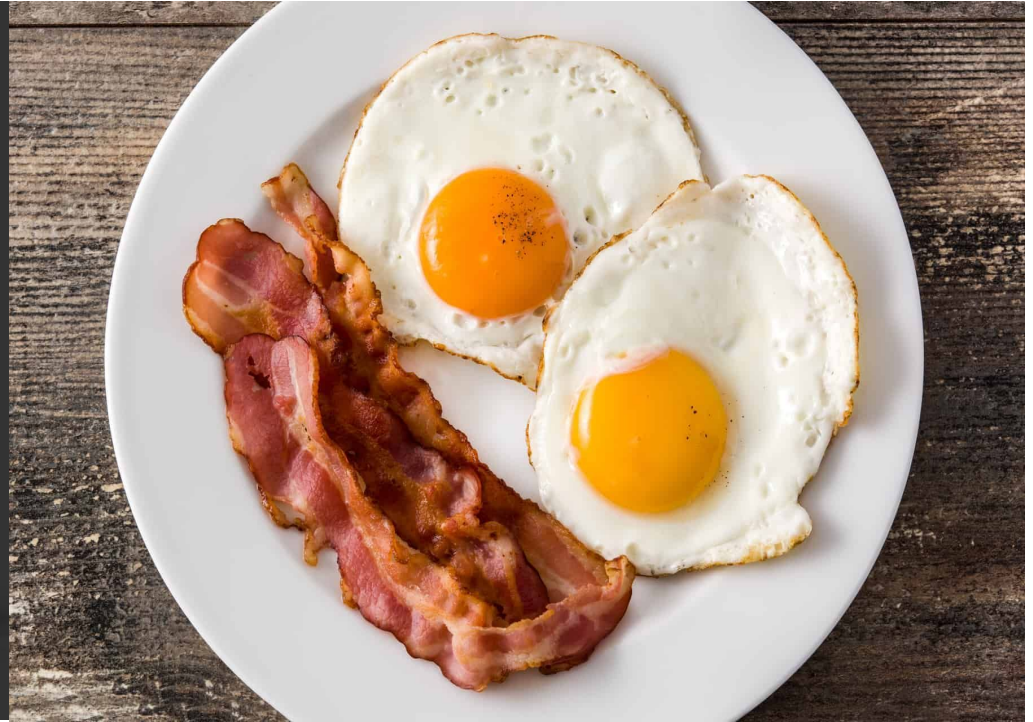

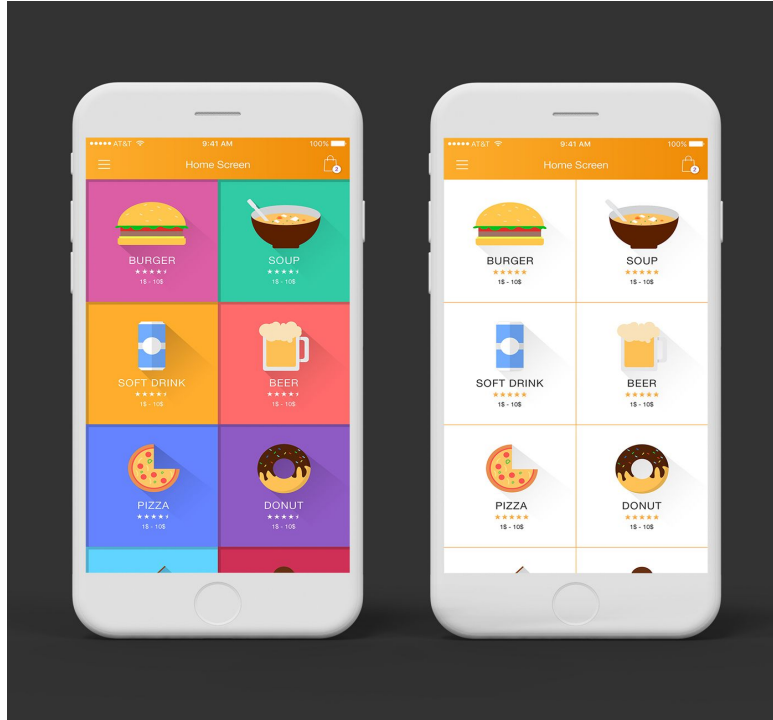

Patrick is already rushing to get ready for his 8:30am history class. He knows he probably shouldn't get breakfast but he is dying of hunger.

Patrick knows he should skip breakfast to make it to class on time but decides that if there is something good he will go and eat first.

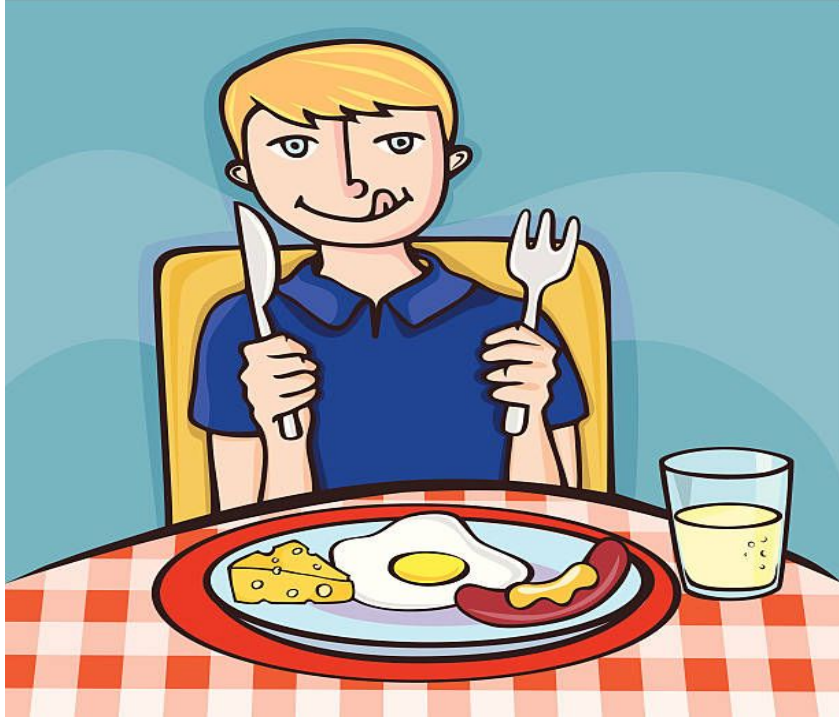

Thankfully there is a new app that tells him what food is available at the local dining hall near him. He sees that there is bacon and eggs and decides to go.

When he clicks on the dining hall that shows him what food there is he also notices the wait time of 25 minutes.

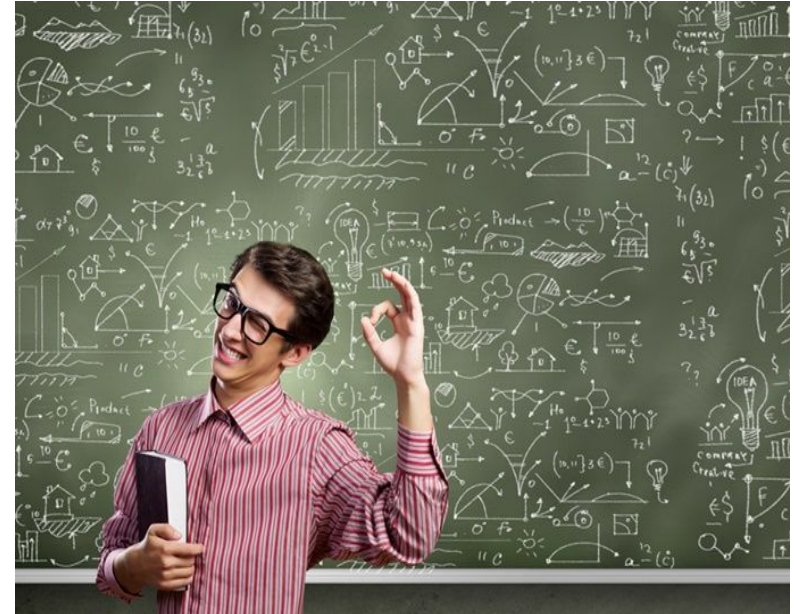

Patrick then decides that he should go to breakfast and skip his first class as a reward for getting up early and promises to himself that he'll make it to the next one.

Chad Brunswick
(Jordan Fowler)

Chad Brunswick is leaving his calculus class at the University of South Carolina, and realizes he is hungry.

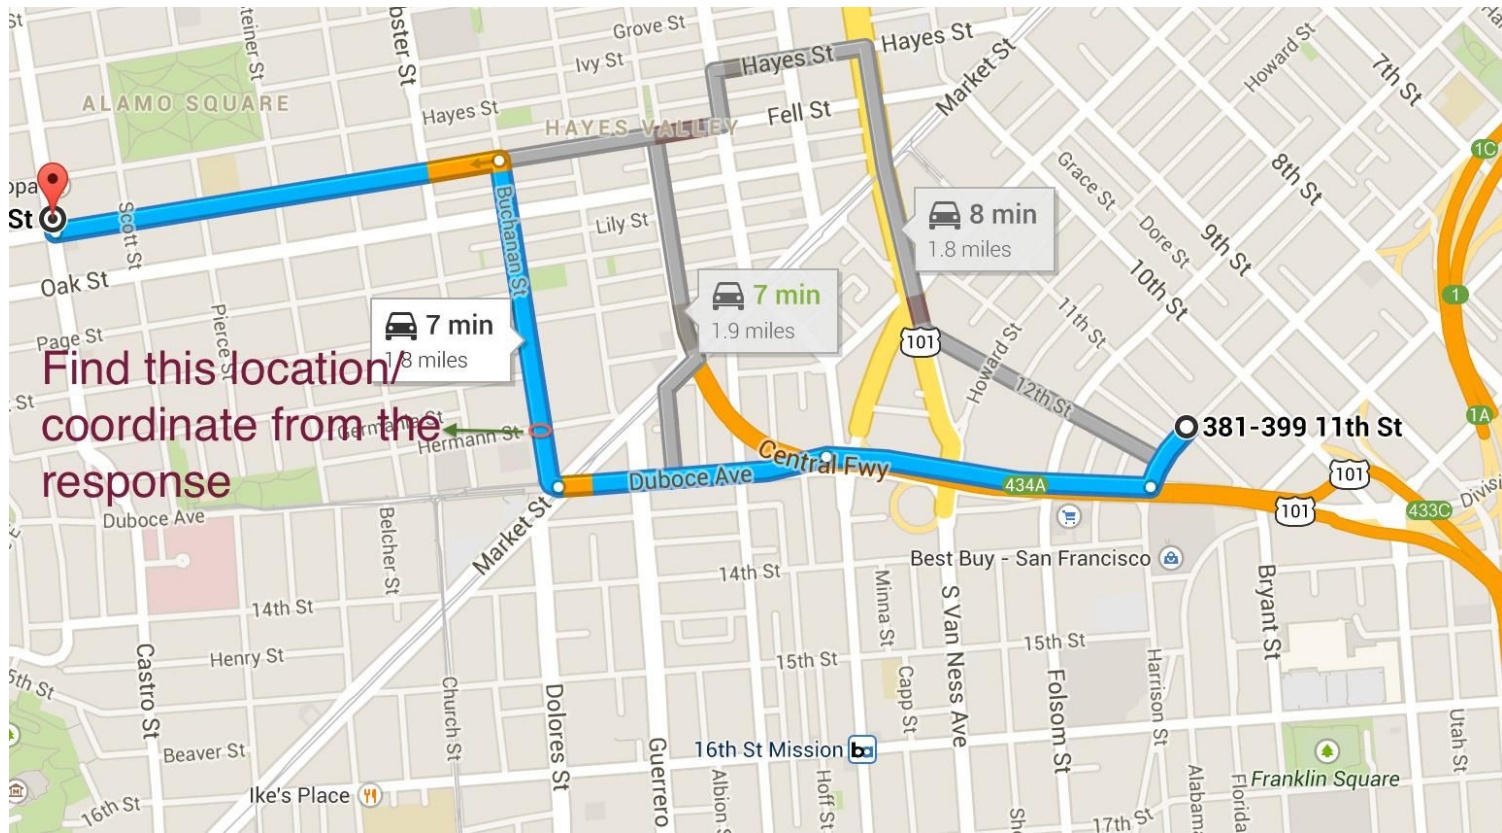

Chad walks to his favorite lunch spot Global Cafe. Chad loves the place because they change what they are serving every day. Chad hates eating the same food twice.

“Oh no” Chad says. He get there and sees that they are serving sirloin steaks and not filet steaks. Chad leaves crying. His frat brother sees him and asks “what is wrong browski?” Chad explains the situation and the frat bro recommends using FoodX to see food menus ahead of time.

Chad downloads and pulls up FoodX. He looks up his second favorite restaurant, and sees that they are serving filet steaks. Relieved, he starts to walk there.

“Bonkers. I’m lost” Chad says. He calls his dad to get directions, but his dad says “Son. I live in California. It’s time you find your own directions.” Chad groans and pulls up FoodX. He sees a big blue button that says directions. He clicks it and begins to follow the blue lines.

Chad arrives at the restaurant and sees the filet. He opens the app and screams “I love you bro!” and leaves a five star rating on the app store.

Glenda Johnson

By: Donovan Williams

Glenda Johnson is serving food for various students in the dining hall making sure everyone leaves with a smile.

Glenda notices some students are not satisfied with the limited variety of food and don't want to eat.

Glenda asks the students why they aren't eating and they answer that they didn't know the menu was something they did not want.

Glenda speaks with her coworkers to figure out a way to let the students know the menu before they walk into the dining hall.

Glenda's coworker shows her an app that allows her to put the menu of the dining hall on it so others can see what is being served for the day.

Glenda's actions allowed students that walked in the dining hall to know what is being served, and allowed more people to leave happy.

A Successful Birthday Party

Lia Zhao

Katie has been busy studying these past few days. However, she didn't let that stop her from forgetting her friends' birthdays. There just so happened to be a birthday coming up in the next week for one of her friends.

She decides to plan a birthday get-together for her friend. Getting all of the details down, Katie realizes that she can't do this all alone. She contacts other people for help. Where are they going to eat? What are they going to eat? Who is coming to celebrate?

Luckily, Katie found the perfect app for this occasion. This app allowed her to sort through all the dining halls and restaurants nearby by rating, distance, and capacity. It could also filter them by dietary restrictions and style/type of food.

On the app, she was able to get her other buddies to plan the birthday celebration with her. The additional information they provided helped Katie decide on the important details of what to eat and where to eat. After several days of planning, she sent a reminder to all of the people going of the decided date and time.

On the night before the get-together, everyone got a notification reminder about it. Despite their busy schedules, Katie and her friends were able to meet and have a great time together. Katie was even able to get a cake for her dear friend.

The birthday celebration was a success. After a week of planning, it was rewarding to see the happy smiles of her friends on such a special day. Katie is so excited for more days like this to come.
